3 MODES OF LISTENING ACTIVE LISTENING is probably the most important listening skill. It is active because it combines the skills of listening and responding without invalidating the speaker's comments, giving the speaker your personal opinion or advice, or drawing the ownership of the conversation away from the speaker.

Developing Effective LISTENING SKILLS

Retaining is the second step in the listening process. Memory is essential to the listening process because the information we retain when involved in the listening process is how we create meaning from words. We depend on our memory to fill in the blanks when we're relistening. Because everyone has different memories, the speaker and the listener may attach different meanings to the same statement.
